Foxcroft Heights Hands-On Session

Saturday, March 26th from 1pm to 4pm

at the Sheraton National Hotel, 900 S. Orme Street

As part of the Columbia Pike Land Use & Housing Study, a special hands-on work session is planned for Foxcroft Heights residents and property owners on Saturday, March 26, 2011. Participants will work in small groups with members of the planning team to draw ideas for the future of the neighborhood. Ideas could include desired enhancements to transportation networks or open spaces, and potential for building revitalization or redevelopment that could be possible in or around the Foxcroft Heights area. Plan to attend and share your views!

A team led by Dover, Kohl & Partners is working with the Arlington community and county staff to plan for the future of the Columbia Pike corridor. Planning currently is focusing on the residential areas - how to strengthen what exists now, how to preserve affordable and mixed income housing and how to expand housing opportunities.

Your input and ideas at this interactive work session to focus on the Foxcroft Heights area will be used to guide the work of the planning team, who will return to present draft concepts at future neighborhood meetings. Planning for the entire Columbia Pike corridor continues in spring/summer 2011. Please visit the project website for details about additional meetings and activities planned:
